honors

Bishop Steven Charleston

with our “Environmental Evangelist” Award. As President and Dean of Episcopal Divinity School, Bishop Steven Charleston has committed himself to making environmental stewardship central, both in upgrades to the physical plant and in the education of ecologically-aware seminarians. In addition to focusing on the Episcopal Divinity School campus and students, Bishop Charleston has reached out to the community of faith in Cambridge and beyond. He helped to organize an event to encourage Cambridge clergy and lay leaders to embrace their leadership role in protecting the climate, resulting in a Proclamation from the City of Cambridge to Episcopal Divinity School for its leadership role. The Reverend Charleston also provided the keynote address at the Massachusetts Interfaith Environmental Network Conference and the sermon at the Fall Forum on Religion and the Environment in Connecticut. His speaking and preaching on these and many other occasions compellingly draw attention to the need to care for the fullness of creation. Thank you, Bishop Charleston, for setting a powerful example of environmental evangelism for the community of faith.
