honors

Episcopal Divinity School

with our “Community Activist” Award. Under the leadership of its President and Dean, the Right Reverend Steven Charleston, Episcopal Divinity School has committed itself to improving its stewardship of the environment. Specifically, Episcopal Divinity School has committed itself to making environmental stewardship central, both in upgrades to its physical plant and in the education of ecologically-aware seminarians. In addition to focusing on its own campus and students, Episcopal Divinity School reached out to the community of faith in Cambridge, helping to organize an event for Cambridge clergy and lay leaders. At this event, participants learned how the community of faith in Cambridge could take a leadership role in implementing and advocating for the Cambridge Climate Action Plan. Thank you, Episcopal Divinity School, for setting a powerful example of environmental stewardship and leadership for the community of faith.
